CMX HIRES SAHER GOUDA AS PROJECT MANAGER FOR THE FIRM'S SUSTAINABLE DESIGN GROUP

MANALAPAN, NJ – JULY 8, 2009 – CMX, a premier engineering and consulting firm, announced that Saher Gouda has been hired as Project Manager in the firm's Sustainable Design group.

Mr. Gouda brings over eight years of experience in the energy industry providing solutions involving energy conservation, energy efficiency and renewable energy. Mr. Gouda's experience in the renewable energy field has ranged from identifying cost-saving opportunities in buildings and operations, to overseeing the installation of large-scale solar photovoltaic (PV) systems.

"Saher Gouda is a perfect fit to assist CMX in its sustainable design endeavors," said Mark Damiano, Chief Operations Officer at CMX. "His experience with Photovoltaic systems will help drive CMX's renewable energy capabilities."

Prior to joining CMX, Saher was responsible for helping develop large-scale solar PV projects for clients such as Bayer Pharmaceuticals, Stevens Institute of Technology and the County of Atlantic, NJ. Mr. Gouda is also a frequent speaker and has conducted engagements for the Atlantic Builder's Convention and the New Jersey Association of School Board Officials. Mr. Gouda holds a B.S. in Economics from the University of Delaware.
